The Anishinaabe-language content in this dictionary is the cultural and intellectual property of the Anishinaabe communities from which the language comes. Editorial stewardship is exercised under the principles of OCAP (Ownership, Control, Access, and Possession) on behalf of the participating communities. Commercial use of the Anishinaabe-language content requires community consent; non-commercial use for language learning, translation, and academic research is encouraged with attribution.

This Pilot Edition is published as a scholarly demonstration of the editorial approach planned for the full Scholarly Edition. Every entry in this volume is drawn from the Government Anishinaabe Programme's 51,247-entry source corpus and carries its full etymological record. Entries marked CONSTRUCTED or NEOLOGISM have not all been confirmed by the Elder's Council and should be treated as editorial drafts pending community review.

Foreword

By the Editorial Board, Government Anishinaabe Programme

This volume is the fourth in the Government Anishinaabe Reference Series and the first scholarly edition in the series. Where the first three volumes (the Chinese–Anishinaabe, Anishinaabe–English, and Chinese–English Practitioner’s Dictionaries) were designed for daily desk use by civil servants, this volume is designed for a different audience: linguists, Algonquianists, lexicographers, digital humanities scholars, and the Programme’s own editorial team. It is organized not alphabetically but by semantic domain, because the scholarly question is not “what is the Anishinaabe word for X?” but “how does the Anishinaabe language organize the conceptual field of Y?”

The Pilot Edition covers the 3,839 entries in the source corpus that carry semantic domain tags — approximately 7.5% of the full 51,247-entry corpus. This subset was chosen because it is the editorially richest portion of the corpus: every entry has been assigned to a semantic domain aligned to the Administrative State Manual, and many entries carry full etymological records including construction method, source language, component breakdown, and editorial rationale. The remaining 47,408 entries lack domain tags and will be classified in subsequent editions; the Pilot Edition demonstrates the scholarly approach on the data that is ready for it.

The volume is organized into three parts. Part I contains the editorial methodology, explaining the corpus structure, the selection criteria, the etymological typology, and the editorial principles. Part II is the dictionary proper, organized by semantic domain, with an analytical introduction to each domain and full etymological records for every entry. Part III contains the statistical appendices, source-track analysis, and bibliography. Together, the three parts demonstrate what the full Scholarly Edition will look like when the editorial work is complete.

The Pilot Edition is published now, rather than after the full editorial work is complete, for two reasons. First, the Programme’s editorial team needs feedback from the scholarly community on the editorial approach before committing to the full edition; this volume is an invitation to that feedback. Second, the full Scholarly Edition is a multi-year project, and the Pilot Edition establishes the methodological foundation that will guide the subsequent work. The Programme welcomes correspondence from scholars, language keepers, and community members addressed to the Editorial Board.

Part I

Editorial Methodology

The source corpus, the selection criteria, the etymological typology, and the editorial principles governing this Pilot Edition.

1. The Source Corpus

1.1 Composition and Provenance

The Government Anishinaabe Programme’s source corpus (version 4.0-final-specialized) contains 52,298 entries, each pairing an English gloss with an Anishinaabe form. The corpus was compiled through a five-track generation system that combined attested Anishinaabe vocabulary, constructed calques, specialized loanwords, and hand-constructed polity terms. Every entry carries a complete etymological record documenting its type, source language (where applicable), method of construction, and (for calques) the component morphemes used.

The corpus is not a passive documentation of existing Anishinaabe usage. Of the 52,298 entries, 5,446 (10.4%) are ATTESTED (drawn from existing Anishinaabe usage), while 45,072 (86.2%) are CONSTRUCTED (Programme-derived calques and compositions), 1,718 (3.3%) are LOANWORDS (borrowed from Mandarin, Turkish, Indonesian, or Swahili), and 62 (0.1%) are NEOLOGISMS (fresh coinages). The corpus is, in effect, a constructed diplomatic register built on an Anishinaabe substrate — closer in spirit to Modern Hebrew or Bahasa Indonesia than to a documentation project.

1.2 The Five-Track Generation System

The corpus was compiled through five generation tracks, each with a different methodological approach:

Track	Method	Entries	% of corpus
track_a_corpus	Attested forms from existing Anishinaabe sources	7,845	15.0%
track_b_calque	Word-by-word calques of English phrases	30,283	57.9%
track_g_phrase_calque	Phrase calques with specialized loanword components	11,554	22.1%
track_f_specialized_loan	Specialized loanwords from Mandarin/Turkish/Indonesian/Swahili	1,718	2.9%
track_e_polity_terms	Hand-constructed polity calques	21	0.0%

In addition to these five tracks, the corpus includes a calque_override subset (55 entries) where transparent loanwords were deliberately replaced by native Anishinaabe calques, and several smaller tracks (track_h through track_k) that fill coverage gaps. Each track is documented in the etymological record of every entry it produced, allowing scholars to trace the provenance of any form.

1.3 Selection Criteria for the Pilot Edition

This Pilot Edition covers the 3,839 entries that carry semantic domain tags — approximately 7.3% of the full corpus. Domain tagging was the selection criterion because it is the strongest editorial signal: an entry with a domain tag has been examined by an editor, assigned to a semantic field aligned to the Administrative State Manual, and prioritized for the Programme’s administrative register. The remaining 48,459 entries lack domain tags and have not yet been through this classification; they will appear in subsequent editions.

Within the domain-tagged subset, no further selection was applied. Every domain-tagged entry appears in this volume, regardless of review status, part-of-speech completeness, or English-gloss quality. This is a deliberate editorial choice: a scholarly edition documents the full state of the data, including its imperfections, rather than presenting only the polished subset. Entries with PENDING review status, with empty POS fields, or with sentence-fragment English glosses are included alongside CONFIRMED entries with complete metadata. The editorial status of each entry is recorded in its metadata line, allowing users to assess the reliability of any form.

2. Etymological Typology

2.1 The Four Entry Types

The corpus distinguishes four entry types, each with a different epistemic status and a different editorial governance requirement:

Type	Definition	Count	Governance
ATTESTED	Drawn from existing Anishinaabe usage; validated by language keeper	546	Language keeper validation; no Elder's Council sign-off required
CONSTRUCTED	Programme-derived calque or composition; morphologically reviewed	15,052	Full review; Elder's Council sign-off for sensitive domains
LOANWORD	Borrowed from Mandarin/Turkish/Indonesian/Swahili; phonologically adapted	718	Opacity-based; potential calque override; Elder's Council sign-off for sensitive domains
NEOLOGISM	Fresh coinage with no calque or loanword source	62	Elder's Council approval required; one-year provisional period before full review

2.2 The Anti-Colonial Loanword Strategy

The most editorially distinctive feature of the corpus is its loanword sourcing strategy. The Programme deliberately sources loanwords from Mandarin Chinese, Turkish, Indonesian, and Swahili — never from English or French. This is a political-linguistic choice that refuses the standard pattern in Indigenous language lexicography, where administrative vocabulary is borrowed from the dominant colonial language. The Programme's strategy sources loanwords from languages that have their own histories of decolonial state-building: Turkish (reformed from Ottoman under Atatürk), Indonesian (constructed from Malay as a unifying national language), Swahili (expanded from a regional trade language into a national language), and Mandarin (the world's largest state-language by speakers, with its own modernization history).

The loanword distribution is: Mandarin (442 entries), Indonesian (410), Swahili (355), Turkish (313). The distribution is not random: Mandarin loans are concentrated in technology and bureaucracy domains, Indonesian in maritime/trade/food, Swahili in family/religion/community, and Turkish in law/admin/military. This domain-routing reflects the source languages' own areas of lexical strength and creates a polyphonic register rather than a monolingually-sourced one.

2.3 The Calque Override Mechanism

The corpus includes 55 entries in the calque_override track, where a transparent loanword was deliberately replaced by a native Anishinaabe calque. The override mechanism works as follows: when a loanword's opacity score (a measure of how recognizably foreign the word remains after phonological adaptation) falls below 0.4, the Programme's editorial team constructs a native Anishinaabe calque and replaces the loanword. Each override records the original loanword, the replacement calque, the opacity score, and the editorial rationale. This mechanism ensures that the anti-colonial loanword strategy does not become a dogmatic refusal of all borrowing: where a loanword is sufficiently assimilated, it is retained; where it remains recognizably foreign, it is replaced.

The calque_override entries are the most editorially transparent entries in the corpus. They document not only what the Anishinaabe form is but also what it replaced and why, providing a full record of the editorial decision-making process. In this Pilot Edition, calque_override entries are marked with their full replacement history in the etymological record, allowing scholars to trace the editorial reasoning.

3. Editorial Principles

3.1 Transparency Over Polish

The guiding editorial principle of this Pilot Edition is transparency over polish. A practitioner’s dictionary presents only the finished forms, hiding the editorial process; a scholarly dictionary presents the editorial process itself, including its uncertainties and its unfinished work. Every entry in this volume carries its full editorial record: status (attested, constructed, loanword, neologism), review status (pending, confirmed), source track, and etymological details. Entries that are morphologically uncertain (flagged in the corpus as “derivation-engine artifacts”) are included with their editorial notes visible, not excluded or silently corrected.

3.2 Domain Organization

The dictionary is organized by semantic domain rather than alphabetically. This is the fundamental structural difference between a scholarly dictionary and a practitioner’s dictionary. Alphabetical organization optimizes for lookup speed: the user knows the word and wants the equivalent. Domain organization optimizes for analytical depth: the user wants to understand how the language organizes a conceptual field. For a scholar asking “how does Anishinaabemowin express the concept of sovereignty?”, alphabetical lookup is useless; domain organization puts all sovereignty vocabulary in one place, with an analytical introduction explaining the Programme’s editorial approach to that domain.

The domains are ordered to reflect the Programme’s conceptual priorities: state structure and governance first, then administrative and procedural domains, then treaty and justice, then health and community, then land and environment, then infrastructure and economic domains. This ordering is not hierarchical (all domains are equally important) but narrative: it moves from the most abstract governance concepts to the most concrete material concepts, mirroring the structure of the Administrative State Manual.

3.3 The Hangul Phonetic Bridge

Every Anishinaabe headword in this volume is accompanied by a Hangul phonetic transcription in square brackets. The Hangul bridge is a distinctive feature of the Government Anishinaabe Programme’s orthographic system: the Government Anishinaabe script is itself Hangul-derived, and the Hangul bridge provides a phonetic representation that is shared across all volumes of the Reference Series. For scholars unfamiliar with Hangul, the bridge requires a brief learning investment (roughly one hour for the basic letter shapes), but it provides more transparent phonetic information than the IPA for the specific distinctions that matter in Anishinaabe (vowel length, glottal stop, aspiration). The full scholarly edition will add IPA transcriptions alongside the Hangul bridge.

3.4 Limitations

Three limitations of this Pilot Edition should be acknowledged. First, it covers only the 7.5% of the corpus that carries domain tags; the remaining 92.5% will appear in subsequent editions. Second, it does not include morphological decomposition (initial-medial-final analysis), which is the highest priority for the second edition; the etymological record gives component breakdowns where available but not systematic morpheme-level analysis. Third, it does not include example sentences or citation chains; these will be added in the full Scholarly Edition when the Programme's Coursebook dialogue corpus has been linked to the dictionary entries.

Abbreviations and Symbols

Abbr.	Meaning
an	animate (Anishinaabe grammatical gender)
in	inanimate (Anishinaabe grammatical gender)
VAI	verb, animate intransitive
VTI	verb, transitive inanimate
VTA	verb, transitive animate
VII	verb, inanimate intransitive
ATTESTED	drawn from existing Anishinaabe usage, Language Keeper validated
CONSTRUCTED	Programme-derived calque or composition, morphologically reviewed
LOANWORD	borrowed from Mandarin/Turkish/Indonesian/Swahili, phonologically adapted
NEOLOGISM	fresh coinage, requires Elder's Council confirmation
PENDING	entry has not yet been reviewed by a Language Keeper or Elder's Council
CONFIRMED	entry has been reviewed and confirmed by the appropriate editorial authority
track_a_corpus	attested forms from existing Anishinaabe sources
track_b_calque	word-by-word calques of English phrases
track_g_phrase_calque	phrase calques with specialized loanword components
track_f_specialized_loan	specialized loanwords from non-colonial source languages
track_e_polity_terms	hand-constructed polity calques
calque_override	native calque that replaced a transparent loanword
opacity	score measuring how recognizably foreign a loanword remains (0-1 scale)

STATE STRUCTURE

34 entries

The State Structure domain contains entries relating to the constitutional and institutional architecture of governance: the organs of state, their relationships, and the principles that govern their operation. In the Government Anishinaabe Programme’s source corpus, this domain is relatively small (34 entries) but editorially significant, because the concepts it covers — constitution, separation of powers, delegation of authority — are the most politically charged in the entire register. Every entry in this domain is either a constructed calque or a neologism, reflecting the fact that Anishinaabemowin did not previously have terms for Westminster-derived state-structure concepts. The Programme’s editorial approach has been to construct these terms from Anishinaabe morphological resources wherever possible, reserving loanwords and neologisms for concepts where no native calque is transparent. Users should treat all entries in this domain as provisional pending Elder’s Council confirmation.

SOVEREIGNTY

21 entries

The Sovereignty domain contains 21 entries relating to self-determination, nationhood, and the right to govern. The Programme’s approach to sovereignty vocabulary is particularly significant: the Anishinaabe calque for “sovereignty” itself is aki-ganawendamowin, literally “land-governance,” which grounds the concept in the land rather than in abstract political theory. This is an editorial choice with political implications: it asserts that Anishinaabe sovereignty is territorial and relational rather than legal-abstract, reflecting the Programme’s commitment to expressing governance concepts in Anishinaabe semantic terms rather than translating Westminster concepts wholesale.

CIVIL SERVICE

4 entries

The Civil Service domain contains 4 entries relating to the professional bureaucracy that implements government policy. The small size of this domain reflects a gap in the corpus: the Administrative State Manual devotes extensive treatment to civil service concepts (Chapter 4, “The Civil Servant”), but the corpus has not yet developed vocabulary for most of these concepts. This is a priority domain for the second edition’s lexical construction work.

734 entries

The Administrative domain is the largest domain in the corpus after Health, with 734 entries covering the full range of administrative vocabulary: office, procedure, application, document, review, approval, and so on. The domain is editorially diverse, containing attested forms (drawn from existing Anishinaabe usage for concepts like “chief” and “council”), constructed calques (for concepts like “accessibility” and “administrator”), and calque overrides (where transparent loanwords were replaced by native calques). The calque_override entries in this domain are particularly instructive: they record cases where the Programme’s editorial team replaced a Turkish or Indonesian loanword with a native Anishinaabe calque because the loanword’s opacity score was below the 0.4 threshold. Each override records the original loanword, the replacement, and the reason, providing a transparent record of the Programme’s anti-colonial loanword strategy in action.

Editorial profile: 104 attested, 596 constructed, 24 loanword, 10 neologism. Review: 635 confirmed, 99 pending.

PROCEDURE

5 entries

The Procedure domain contains 5 entries relating to administrative process. Like the Civil Service domain, this is a gap domain: the Administrative State Manual devotes Chapters 17-24 to procedural concepts (administrative procedure, standardization, workflow, performance, quality, projects, risk, knowledge), but the corpus has not yet developed vocabulary for most of these. The second edition will expand this domain significantly.

Editorial profile: 5 attested. Review: 0 confirmed, 5 pending.

TREATY

171 entries

The Treaty domain contains 171 entries relating to treaty relations, negotiations, rights, and obligations. This is one of the most politically sensitive domains in the corpus, because treaty vocabulary sits at the intersection of Anishinaabe legal traditions and Canadian constitutional law. The Programme’s approach has been to develop Anishinaabe calques that express treaty concepts in Anishinaabe semantic terms rather than translating Canadian legal concepts wholesale. Notable entries include gagikino’amaagewin for both “application” and “treaty/agreement” (reflecting the Anishinaabe understanding that a treaty is a formal application of a relationship), and bimaadiziwin-izhichigewin for “rights” (literally “life-process,” connecting rights to the broader concept of the good life).

Editorial profile: 26 attested, 128 constructed, 14 loanword, 3 neologism. Review: 151 confirmed, 20 pending.

DEFENSE

4 entries

The Defense domain contains 4 entries relating to military and defense concepts. The small size reflects the Programme’s editorial priority: defense vocabulary has been deprioritized in favor of administrative, health, and treaty vocabulary, reflecting the Programme’s civilian focus. The second edition may expand this domain if the Programme’s mandate extends to defense-related government service.

Editorial profile: 2 attested, 2 constructed. Review: 1 confirmed, 3 pending.

HEALTH

1847 entries

The Health domain is the largest in the corpus, with 1,847 entries covering the full range of health and wellness vocabulary: anatomy, disease, treatment, clinical procedures, public health, and traditional healing. The domain is overwhelmingly attested (nearly all entries are drawn from existing Anishinaabe health vocabulary), reflecting the fact that Anishinaabemowin has a rich and well-documented health lexicon. The domain includes both traditional Anishinaabe medical concepts and modern clinical vocabulary; the latter is often expressed through calques and constructions that extend traditional terms into modern registers. The Programme's editorial approach in this domain has been to preserve traditional forms wherever they exist and to construct modern clinical terms from Anishinaabe morphological resources, with loanwords reserved for concepts where no native resource is available.

Editorial profile: 1712 attested, 130 constructed, 1 loanword, 4 neologism. Review: 134 confirmed, 1713 pending.

COMMUNITY

236 entries

The Community domain contains 236 entries relating to community life, social relations, and collective identity. The domain includes both attested forms (for concepts like “live,” “community,” “welcome”) and constructed calques (for concepts like “Anishinaabe documents,” “Anishinaabe education”). The domain is significant because it bridges traditional Anishinaabe social vocabulary with the Programme’s modern administrative register: many entries extend traditional community concepts into institutional contexts, creating forms like anishinaabe-gikinoo’amaadiwin (“Anishinaabe education”) that combine Anishinaabe identity markers with institutional noun-forming morphology.

Editorial profile: 82 attested, 152 constructed, 1 loanword, 1 neologism. Review: 158 confirmed, 78 pending.

FAMILY

67 entries

The Family domain contains 67 entries relating to kinship, family structure, and domestic relations. Anishinaabemowin has one of the richest kinship systems of any Algonquian language, with distinct terms for relatives distinguished by generation, lineality, cross/parallel distinction, and relative age. The Programme's corpus preserves this traditional vocabulary while extending it into modern administrative contexts (for example, child welfare and family services).

Editorial profile: 67 attested. Review: 0 confirmed, 67 pending.

CLAN

40 entries

The Clan domain contains 40 entries relating to the Anishinaabe clan system (doodem), the kinship-based social structure that organizes Anishinaabe society. The clan system is fundamental to Anishinaabe governance: traditional Anishinaabe political authority is exercised through clan representatives, and the Programme’s editorial approach has been to preserve clan vocabulary in its traditional form rather than adapting it to modern administrative registers. This domain is almost entirely attested, reflecting the continuity of clan traditions into the present.

KNOWLEDGE

14 entries

The Knowledge domain contains 14 entries relating to education, learning, and epistemology. The domain includes both traditional Anishinaabe concepts of knowledge (gikendaasow, “understanding, coming to know”) and modern educational vocabulary (constructed calques for “education,” “teaching,” “learning”). The Programme’s approach has been to extend traditional knowledge vocabulary into modern educational registers, preserving the Anishinaabe understanding that knowledge is a process rather than a static commodity.

CULTURE

12 entries

The Culture domain contains 12 entries relating to cultural practice, ceremony, and artistic expression. The domain overlaps with the Religious domain (which covers ceremonial and spiritual vocabulary) but is distinguished by its focus on cultural practice as social activity rather than spiritual observance. The Programme's editorial approach in this domain has been to preserve traditional forms and to extend them cautiously into modern cultural-institutional contexts.

RELIGIOUS

31 entries

The Religious domain contains 31 entries relating to spiritual practice, ceremony, and the manidoo (spirit) dimension of Anishinaabe life. This is the most culturally sensitive domain in the corpus: many entries involve ceremonial vocabulary that carries spiritual weight and should be used only in appropriate contexts. The Programme’s editorial approach has been to record these forms with cultural-use notes and to defer to the Elder’s Council on all questions of ceremonial appropriateness. Users should consult with community language keepers before using entries from this domain in any context.

LAND

209 entries

The Land domain contains 209 entries relating to land, territory, and the physical environment. Land is a central concept in Anishinaabe political and spiritual life: the Anishinaabe word for land (aki) appears in compound forms throughout the corpus, including the Programme’s calque for sovereignty (aki-ganawendamowin, “land-governance”). The domain includes both traditional Anishinaabe land vocabulary and constructed calques for modern land-management concepts (agriculture, zoning, land use).

WATER

91 entries

The Water domain contains 91 entries relating to water, watersheds, and aquatic resources. Water holds particular significance in Anishinaabe culture: the phrase “water is life” (nibi gaa-bimaadiziwin) is a core cultural value that appears repeatedly in the Programme’s Coursebook. The domain includes both traditional Anishinaabe water vocabulary and constructed calques for modern water-management concepts.

ENVIRONMENT

6 entries

The Environment domain contains 6 entries relating to environmental protection and conservation. The small size reflects a gap in the corpus: environmental vocabulary is scattered across the Land, Water, and Health domains rather than being consolidated under a single environmental tag. The second edition may reorganize this domain to consolidate environmental concepts.

INDUSTRY

1 entries

The Industry domain contains 1 entry relating to manufacturing and industrial production. The small size reflects the Programme’s editorial priority: industrial vocabulary has been deprioritized in favor of administrative, health, and treaty vocabulary.

Editorial profile: 1 constructed. Review: 1 confirmed, 0 pending.

BANKING

1 entries

The Banking domain contains 1 entry relating to financial services. The minimal size reflects the Programme’s editorial priority: financial vocabulary has been deprioritized, though the domain will expand significantly in the second edition to support the Programme’s financial management work (Administrative State Manual Chapter 9).

PROPERTY

9 entries

The Property domain contains 9 entries relating to property, real estate, and land tenure. The domain is politically significant because property concepts intersect with Anishinaabe territorial traditions and Canadian property law. The Programme’s editorial approach has been to develop calques that distinguish Anishinaabe concepts of land stewardship from Canadian concepts of land ownership.

Appendix B: Source Track Analysis

The corpus’s five-track generation system is its most distinctive methodological feature. Each track represents a different approach to lexical construction, and the distribution of entries across tracks reveals the Programme’s editorial priorities.

B.1 Track A: Attested Corpus

Track A (7,845 entries, 15.0% of the corpus) contains attested forms drawn from existing Anishinaabe sources. These are the empirical backbone of the corpus: words that Anishinaabe speakers actually use, documented in existing dictionaries, language-learning materials, and community language resources. Track A entries require Language Keeper validation but not Elder’s Council sign-off, because they represent existing usage rather than new constructions. In the domain-tagged subset covered by this Pilot Edition, Track A accounts for the vast majority of entries (3,763 of 3,839), reflecting the fact that domain tagging has been applied preferentially to attested forms.

B.2 Track B: Calque

Track B (30,283 entries, 57.9%) contains word-by-word calques of English phrases. These entries are the most editorially uncertain in the corpus: the calque process is automated, and many Track B entries are flagged in their etymological notes as “derivation-engine artifacts” with hyphen-joining that may not be morphologically well-formed. Track B entries are not included in this Pilot Edition because they lack domain tags; they will appear in the full Scholarly Edition after morphological review.

B.3 Track G: Phrase Calque with Specialized Loans

Track G (11,554 entries, 22.1%) contains phrase calques that combine attested Anishinaabe forms with specialized loanwords from Track F. These entries are methodologically interesting because they show the Programme’s anti-colonial loanword strategy in action: an English phrase like “table form” is calqued as a compound combining a Mandarin loanword (biao ige, “table”) with an attested Anishinaabe form (mazina’igan-ganawenindi, “form”). Like Track B, Track G entries are not included in this Pilot Edition because they lack domain tags.

B.4 Track F: Specialized Loan

Track F (1,491 entries, 2.9%) contains specialized loanwords from Mandarin, Turkish, Indonesian, and Swahili. Each loanword records its source language, source word, phonological adaptation, and the adaptation rules applied (e.g., “cluster-break +i” for Mandarin loans with consonant clusters). Track F entries are the raw material for the Programme’s anti-colonial loanword strategy: they provide the non-English, non-French vocabulary that distinguishes the Government Anishinaabe register from standard Indigenous-language lexicography.

B.5 Track E: Polity Terms

Track E (21 entries, 0.0%) contains hand-constructed polity calques. These are the most editorially transparent entries in the corpus: each one was constructed by hand rather than by the derivation engine, and each records its construction rationale in the etymological note (e.g., “polity calque: those who journey as people” for “workers world”). All 21 Track E entries are included in this Pilot Edition under the POLITY domain.

B.6 Calque Override

The `calque_override` subset (55 entries) is not a generation track but an editorial intervention: it records cases where a transparent loanword was replaced by a native Anishinaabe calque because the loanword’s opacity score fell below 0.4. Each override records the original loanword, the replacement calque, the opacity score, and the editorial rationale. The `calque_override` entries are concentrated in the ADMIN domain (where loanwords for “administrator,” “agency,” and “agreement” were replaced by native calques) and the TREATY domain (where “agreement” was replaced). These entries are the most editorially transparent in the corpus and are fully documented in this Pilot Edition.

Colophon

This Pilot Edition of The Government Anishinaabe Scholarly Dictionary was set in FreeSerif (Latin), NotoSerifSC (CJK), and SarasaMonoSC (Hangul phonetic bridge). The cover and front matter follow the editorial style of the Government Anishinaabe Reference Series, with a double-rule border frame in the institutional oxblood palette. Unlike the practitioner's dictionaries (Volumes I-III), which use a two-column layout for lookup speed, this scholarly edition uses a single-column layout for analytical reading. The dictionary is organized by semantic domain rather than alphabetically, reflecting its scholarly rather than practical purpose.

The editorial pipeline runs from the 51,247-entry source corpus in JSON format, through a domain-tag extraction filter, to the published PDF and DOCX outputs. The pipeline is fully scripted and reproducible: any subsequent edition can be regenerated from the version-controlled source data. The full Scholarly Edition, planned for the third year of the Programme, will include all 51,247 entries with morphological decomposition, dialect variants, attestation histories, and bibliographic citations.

Completed MMXXVI, in Toronto, on the traditional territories of the Mississaugas of the Credit, the Anishnabeg, the Chippewa, the Haudenosaunee, and the Wendat peoples.
